The state media is controlled by and provides most space to one particular party, and ensures that national history and values are interpreted from a particular party perspective. The military, police When a State turns on its Citizens 45 and intelligence services and the bulk of the public service imbibed this ideological ethos. Thus there was a conscious strategy to construct a one-party state in which there was a fusion of the ruling party and its ideology with the state between 1980 and 2000.
